An introductory lecture to topological order

Tai-Kai Ng
Hong Kong University of Science and Technology

The lecture is divided into two parts: in the first half I shall explain what is topological order using classical, Ising-like models as example. Afterward I shall consider quantum systems and explain how the concepts developed in the first half of the lecture can be applied to understand some examples of quantum topological order, including matrix-product states and topological insulator.